

Potter (A.)

THE
DRINKING USAGES OF SOCIETY.

An Address,

BY ALONZO POTTER, D. D.,

BISHOP OF THE DIOCESE OF PENNSYLVANIA

Library
50939
Washington D.C.

NEW YORK:

National Temperance Society and Publication House,

No. 58 READE STREET.

1871.

For Sunday-School Libraries.

The Temperance Doctor. 12mo, 370 pp. By Miss MARY DWINELL CHELLIS, Author of "Deacon Sim's Prayers," etc. ....	$1 25
The Old Brown Pitcher. 12mo, 222 pp. By the Author of "Susy's Six Birthdays," "The Flower of the Family," etc. ....	1 00
Out of the Fire. 12mo, 420 pp. By Miss MARY DWINELL CHELLIS, Author of "Temperance Doctor," "Deacon Sim's Prayers," etc. ....	1 25
Our Parish. 18mo, 252 pp. By Miss EMILY C. PEARSON. ....	75
The Hard Master. 18mo, 278 pp. By Mrs. J. E. MCCONAUGHY. ....	85
Echo Bunk. 18mo, 269 pp. By ERVIE. ....	85
The Red Bridge. 18mo, 321 pp. By THRACE TALMAN. ....	90
Rachel Noble's Experience. 18mo, 325 pp. By BRUCE EDWARDS. ....	90
Vow at the Birs. 18mo, 103 pp. ....	40
History of a Threepenny Bit. 18mo, 216 pp. ....	75
Philip Eckert's Struggles and Triumphs. 18mo, 216 pp. By the Author of "Margaret Clair" ....	60
Gertie's Sacrifice; or, Glimpses at Two Lives. 18mo, 189 pp. By Mrs. F. D. GAGE. ....	50
The Broken Rock. 18mo, 139 pp. By KRUNA. ....	50
Andrew Douglass. 18mo, 232 pp. By the Author of "Madeline," "Harry and his Dog," etc. ....	75
Rev. Dr. Willoughby and his Wine. 12mo, 458 pp. By Mrs. MARY SPRING WALKER, author of "The Family Doctor," etc. ....	1 50
Aunt Dinah's Pledge. 12mo, 318 pp. By Miss MARY DWINELL CHELLIS, Author of "Temperance Doctor," "Out of the Fire," etc. ....	1 25
Frank Oldfield; or, Lost and Found. 12mo, 408 pp. By Rev. T. P. WILSON, M.D. ....	1 50
Tom Blinn's Temperance Society, and other Stories. 12mo, 320 pp. By T. S. ARTHUR, Author of "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room." ....	1 25
The Best Fellow in the World. 12mo, 360 pp. ....	1 25
The McAllisters. 18mo, 216 pp. ....	50
The Drinking-Fountain Stories. 192 pp. Illustrated. ....	1 00
Jug-Or-Not. By Mrs. J. McNAIR WRIGHT, Author of "John and the Demijohn," "Almost a Nun," "Priest and Nun," etc. ....	1 25
Come Home, Mother. 18mo, 144 pp. By NELSIE BROOK. ....	50
Job Tuston's Rest. 12mo, 332 pp. By CLARA LUCAS BALFOUR. ....	1 25
The Harker Family. 12mo, 336 pp. By EMILY THOMPSON. ....	1 25
Tim's Troubles. 12mo, 350 pp. By M. A. PAULL. ....	1 50
Hopedale Tavern. 12mo, 252 pp. By J. W. VAN NAMEE. ....	1 00
Roy's Search. 12mo, 264 pp. By HELEN C. PEARSON. ....	1 25
How Could He Escape? 12mo, 312 pp. By Mrs. J. McNAIR WRIGHT. ....	1 25
The Pitcher of Cool Water. 18mo, 180 pp. By T. S. ARTHUR. ....	50
Temperance Anecdotes. 12mo, 288 pp. By GEO. W. BUNGAY. ....	1 00
The Temperance Speaker. 18mo, 288 pp. By J. N. STEARNS. ....	75
Frank Spencer's Rule of Life. 18mo, 180 pp. By J. W. KIRTON. ....	50
The Seymours. 12mo, 231 pp. By Miss L. BATES. ....	1 00
The Little Girl in Black. 12mo. By MARGARET E. WILMER. ....	1 00
At Lion's Mouth. 12mo, 412 pp. By Miss MARY D. CHELLIS. ....	1 25
Time Will Tell. 12mo, 307 pp. By Mrs. WILSON BALLINA. ....	1 00
Adopted. 18mo, 236 pp. By Mrs. E. J. RICHMOND. ....	60

THE
DRINKING USAGES OF SOCIETY.

---

AN ADDRESS

By ALONZO POTTER, D.D.,

BISHOP OF THE DIOCESE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

---

WE have assembled, ladies and gentlemen, to contribute our aid in arresting a great and crying evil. We do not aim to promote directly that temperance which forms one of the noblest and most comprehensive of the Christian virtues. Our simple object is to prevent drunkenness, with its legion of ills, by drying up the principal sources from which it flows. To one of these sources, and that the most active and powerful, I propose to ask your attention this evening. The occasion, I need not say, is a most worthy one; one that merits the warmest sympathy and support of every patriot and philanthropist, of every follower of Jesus Christ.

For what is Intemperance, and what the extent and magnitude of its evils? Of these we all know something. We all know how it diseases the body; how it disturbs the equilibrium of the intellect; how it poisons the springs of generous affection in the heart, and lays a ruthless hand upon the whole moral and spiritual nature. What drunkenness does to its poor victim, and to those who are bound to him by the closest ties, you all know. All know, did I say? Let us thank God that few of you can know, or are likely to know, the inexpressible horrors which fill the soul of the inebriate, or the gloom and anguish of heart which are the portion of his family. You know enough, however, to feel, that where this sin enters, there a blight falls on happiness, virtue, and even hope. Look at the palpable shame and misery and guilt which collect within and about one drunkard's home; and then multiply their dreadful sum by the whole number of such homes which, at this moment, can be found in this Christian city; and you will have an accumulation of sin and sorrow, even at your doors, which no mortal arithmetic can gauge, but which is sufficient to appall the stoutest heart, and move to sympathy the coldest charity.

But whence does this vast and hideous evil come? To you, as a jury of inquest, standing over the victims it strikes down, I appeal for a verdict according to truth and evidence. Can it be said, that they who are now cold in death, with a drunkard's shame branded on their memory, "died by visitation of God?" God sends no such curse even upon the guiltiest of his creatures. He may send pestilence and earthquake; He may send blasting and mildew; but He commissions no moral plague, like drunkenness, to carry desolation to the souls as well as bodies of men. This evil, alas! is self-invoked and self-inflicted.

And how? Do men rush deliberately, and with full purpose of heart, into such an abyss? Is there any one so lost to self-respect, to all prudence and duty, so devoid of every finer instinct and sentiment of our nature, that he can willingly sink down to the ignominy and the woe that are the drunkard's portion? I tell you nay. Every human being recoils, with involuntary horror and disgust, from the contem plation of such a fate. He shrinks from it, as he would from the foul embraces of a serpent, and feels that he would sooner sacrifice everything than take his place beside the bloated and degraded beings who seem dead to all that is noble in our nature or hopeful in our lot. These are victims that have gone blindfold to their fate. Gentle is the declivity, smooth and noiseless the descent, which conducts them, step by step, along the treacherous way, till suddenly their feet slide, and they find themselves plunging over the awful precipice.

And what is that deceitful road? Or which is the perfidious guide who stands ever ready to turn aside the feet of the unwary traveler? Here, ladies and gentlemen, is the great question. To arrest an evil effectually, we must know its nature and cause. It is idle to lop off branches, while the trunk stands firm and full of life. It is idle to destroy noxious leaves or flowers, while the plant still pours forth its malignant humors at the root. If we would go to the bottom of this evil, if we would lay the axe to the very root of the baleful tree, we must see how and whence it is that unsuspecting multitudes are thus ensnared, never scenting danger till they begin to taste of death.

It will be admitted, I presume, by all who hear me, that, if there were no temperate drinking, there would be none that is intemperate. Men do not begin by what is usually called immoderate indulgence, but by that which they regard as moderate. Gradually and insensibly their draughts are increased until the functions of life are permanently disturbed, the system becomes inflamed, and there is that morbid appetite which will hardly brook restraint, and the indulgence of which is sottish intemperance. Let it be remembered, then, that what is usually styled temperate drinking stands as the condition precedent to that which is intemperate. Discontinue one, and the other becomes impossible.

But what is the cause of moderate or temperate drinking? Is it the force of natural appetite? Rarely. Nine-tenths, if not ninety-nine-hundredths, of those who use alcoholic stimulants, do it, in the first instance, and often for a long time, not from appetite, but from deference to custom or fashion. Usage has associated intoxicating drinks with good fellowship, with offices of hospitality and friendship. However false and dangerous such an association may be, it is not surprising, that, when once established, it continually gathered strength; with some, through appetite; with others, through interest. It is in this way that what we term Drinking Usages have become incorporated with every pursuit in life, with the tastes and habits of every grade and class of society. In the drawing-room and dining-room of the affluent, in the public room of the hotel, in every place of refreshment, in the social gatherings of the poor, in the harvest-field and the workshop, alcoholic liquor was at one time deemed essential. Too often it is deemed so still. Many a host and employer, many a young companion, shrinks even now from the idea of exchanging the kind offices of life, without the aid of intoxicating liquors, as he would shrink from some sore offense against taste and propriety. Not to put the cup to your neighbor's lip, in one word, is to sin against that most absolute of earthly sovereigns, Fashion.

Here, then, lies the gist of the whole difficulty. Fashion propagates itself downward. Established and upheld by the more refined and opulent, it is soon caught up by those in less conspicuous walks. It thus spreads itself over the whole face of society, and, becoming allied with other principles, is planted deep in the habits and associations of a people. It is pre-eminently so with drinking usages. Immemorial custom; the example of those whose education or position gives them a commanding sway over the opinions and practice of others; appetite, with them who have drunk till what was once but compliance with usage is now an imperious craving; the interest of many, who thrive by the traffic in intoxicating drinks, or by the follies into which they betray men—here are causes which so fortify and strengthen these usages, that they seem to defy all change. But let us not despair. We address those who are willing to think, and who are accustomed to bring every question to the stern test of utility and duty. To these, then, we appeal.

Drinking usages are the chief cause of Intemperance; and these usages derive their force and authority, in the first instance, wholly from those who give law to fashion. Let this be considered. Do you ask for the treacherous guide, who, with winning smiles and honeyed accents, leads men forward from one degree of indulgence to another, till they are besotted and lost? Seek him not in the purlieus of the low grog shop; seek him not in any scenes of coarse and vulgar revelry. He is to be found where they meet who are the observed of all observers. There, in the abodes of the rich and admired; there, amidst all the enchantments of luxury and elegance; where friend pledges friend; where wine is invoked to lend new animation to gayety, and impart new brilliancy to wit; in the sparkling glass, which is raised even by the hand of beautiful and lovely woman—there is the most dangerous decoy. Can that be unsafe which is thus associated with all that is fair and graceful in woman, with all that is attractive and brilliant in man? Must not that be proper, and even obligatory, which has the deliberate and time-honored sanction of those who stand before the world as the “glass of fashion,” and “rose of the fair state?”

Thus reason the great proportion of men. They are looking continually to those who, in their estimation, are more favored of fortune or more accomplished in mind and manners. We do not regulate our watches more carefully or more universally by the town-clock, than do nine-tenths of mankind take their tone from the residue, who occupy places toward which all are struggling.

Let the responsibility of these drinking usages be put, then, where it justly belongs. When you visit on some errand of mercy the abodes of the poor and afflicted; when you look in on some home which has been made dark by drunkenness—where hearts are desolate and hearths are cold; where want is breaking in as an armed man; where the wife is heart-broken or debased, and children are fast demoralizing; where little can be heard but ribaldry, blasphemy, and obscenity—friends! would you connect effect with cause, and trace this hideous monster back to its true parent, let your thoughts fly away to some abode of wealth and refinement, where conviviality reigns; where, amidst joyous greetings, and friendly protestations, and merry shouts, the flowing bowl goes round; and there you will see that which is sure to make drinking everywhere attractive, and which, in doing so, never fails, and can not fail, to make drunkenness common.

Would we settle our account, then, with the drinking usages of the refined and respectable? We must hold them answerable for maintaining corresponding usages in other classes of society; and we must hold them answerable, further, for the frightful amount of intemperance which results from those usages. We must hold them accountable for all the sin, and all the unhappiness, and all the pinching poverty, and all the nefarious crimes, to which Intemperance gives rise. So long as these usages maintain their place among the respectable, so long will drinking and drunkenness abound through all grades and conditions of life. Neither the power of law aimed at the traffic in liquors, nor the force of argument addressed to the understandings and consciences of the many, will ever prevail to cast out the fiend drunkenness, so long as they who are esteemed the favored few uphold with unyielding hand the practice of drinking.

Hence, the question, whether this monster evil shall be abated, resolves itself always into another question ; and that is, Will the educated, the wealthy, the respectable, persist in sustaining the usages which produce it? Let them resolve that these usages shall no longer have their countenance, and their insidious power is broken. Let them resolve, that wherever they go, the empty wine-glass shall proclaim their silent protest ; and fashion, which now commands us to drink, shall soon command us with all-potential voice to abstain.

Now, what is there in these usages to entitle them to the patronage of the wise and good? Are they necessary? Are they safe or useful?

Unless they can show some offset to the vast amount of evil which they occasion, they ought surely to be ruled out of court. But is any one prepared to maintain that these DRINKING USAGES are necessary—that it is necessary, or even useful, that men should use intoxicating liquors as beverage? Do they add vigor to muscle, or strength to intellect, or warmth to the heart, or rectitude to the conscience? The experience of thousands, and even millions, has answered this question. In almost every age and quarter of the world, but especially within the last twenty-five years and in our own land, many have made trial of entire abstinence from all that can intoxicate. How few of them will confess that they have suffered from it, either in health of body, or elasticity of spirits, or energy and activity of mind! How many will testify that in each of these respects they were sensible gainers from the time they renounced the use of all alcoholic stimulants!

But, if neither useful nor necessary, can it be contended that these drinking customs are harmless? Are they not expensive? Many a moderate drinker, did he reckon up accurately the cost of this indulgence, would discover that it forms one of his heaviest burdens. No taxes, says Franklin, are so oppressive* as those which men levy on themselves. Appetite and fashion, vanity and ostentation, constitute our most rapacious tax-gatherers. It is computed by Mr. Porter, an English statistician of distinguished ability, but of no special interest in the subject which we are now discussing, that the laboring people of Great Britain, exclusive of the middle and higher classes, expend no less than £53,000,000 ($250,000,000) every year on alcoholic liquors and tobacco! There is little doubt that the amount, directly or indirectly, consumed in Pennsylvania† annually for the same indulgence, equals $10,000,000—a sum which, could it be saved for four successive years, would pay the debt which now hangs like * “My companion at the press,” says Franklin, speaking of his life as a journeyman-printer in London, “drank every day a pint before breakfast, a pint at breakfast with his bread and cheese, a pint between breakfast and dinner, a pint at dinner, a pint in the afternoon about six o’clock, and another when he had done his day’s work. I thought it a detestable custom; but it was necessary, he supposed, to drink strong beer, that he might be strong to labor. I endeavored to convince him that the bodily strength afforded by beer could only be in proportion to the grain or flour of the barley dissolved in the water of which it was made; that there was more flour in a pennyworth of bread; and therefore, if he could eat that with a pint of water, it would give him more strength than a quart of beer. He drank on, however, and had four or five shillings to pay out of his wages every Saturday night for that vile liquor—an expense which I was free from; and thus these poor devils keep themselves always under.”—See “Dr. Franklin’s Life, Written by Himself.”

---

† In Western Pennsylvania, one of the most valuable products is bituminous coal. Great quantities are sent down the Ohio, and are paid for in whisky. I was informed by a distinguished citizen of that part of the State, that every year shows a balance against the producers of coal, and in favor of the distillers!

an incubus on the energies of the Commonwealth. In wasting $250,000,000 every year, the laboring population of Britain put it beyond the power of any government to avert from multitudes of them the miseries of want. Were but a tithe of that sum wrenched from the hands of toil-worn labor, and buried in the Thames or the ocean, we should all regard it as an act of stupendous folly and guilt. Yet it were infinitely better that such a sum should be cast into the depths of the sea, than that it should be expended in a way which must debauch the morals, and destroy the health, and lay waste the personal and domestic happiness of thousands. If the question be narrowed down to one of mere material wealth, no policy can be more suicidal than that which upholds usages, the inevitable effect of which is to paralyze the productive powers of a people, and to derange the proper and natural distribution of property. Remember, then, he who sustains these usages sustains the most prolific source of improvidence and want. He makes, at the same time, an inroad upon his own personal income, which is but a loan from God, intrusted to him for his own and others' good.

But these drinking usages are not only expensive; they are unreasonable. What is their practical effect? It is that others shall decide for us a question, which ought most clearly to be referred only to our own taste and sense of duty. We are to drink, whether it be agreeable to us or not; whether we think it right or not; whether we think it safe or not. Moreover—and this is sufficiently humiliating—we are to drink precisely when, and precisely where, others prescribe. It has been said, that in some parts of our country, one must either drink with a man who invites him, or fight. It is not long since, in every part of it, one must either drink when invited or incur the frowns and jeers of those who claimed to be arbiters of propriety. And, even now, he or she who will not drink at all, or will drink only when their own reason and inclination bid, must not be surprised if they provoke invective or ridicule. And is a bondage like this to be upheld? Does it become free-born Americans, who boast so much of liberty, to bow down their necks to a servitude so unrelenting, and yet so absurd?

A German nobleman once paid a visit to Great Britain, when the practice of toasting and drinking healths was at its height. Wherever he went, during a six months' tour, he found himself obliged to drink, though never so loath. He must pledge his host and his hostess. He must drink with every one who would be civil to him, and with every one, too, who wished a convenient pretext for taking another glass. He must drink a bumper in honor of the king and queen, in honor of church and state, in honor of the army and navy. How often did he find himself retiring with throbbing temples and burning cheek from these scenes of intrusive hospitality! At length his visit drew to a close; and to requite, in some measure, the attentions which had been lavished upon him, he made a grand entertainment. Assembling those who had done him honor, he gathered them round a most sumptuous banquet, and feasted them to their utmost content. The tables were then cleared. Servants entered with two enormous hams; one was placed at each end; slices were cut and passed round to each guest, when the host rose, and with all gravity said, "Gentlemen, I give you the king! please eat to his honor." His guests protested. They had dined; they were Jews; they were already surcharged through his too generous cheer. But he was inflexible. "Gentlemen," said he, "for six months you have compelled me to drink at your bidding. Is it too much that you should now eat at mine? I have been submissive: why should you not follow my example? You will please do honor to your king! You shall then be served with another slice in honor of the queen, another to the prosperity of the royal family, and so on to the end of the chapter!"

But, waiving the absurdity and costliness of these usages, let me ask if they are safe. No one who drinks can be perfectly certain that he may not die a drunkard. Numbers which defy all computation have gone this road, who were once as self-confident as any of us can be. No one, again, who drinks can be certain that he may not, in some unguarded hour, fall into a debauch, in which he shall commit some error or perpetrate some crime that will follow him, with shame and sorrow, all his days. How many a young man, by one such indiscretion, has cast a cloud over all his prospects for life! You have read Shakspeare's "Othello," the most finished and perfect, perhaps, of all his tragedies. What is it but a solemn Temperance Lecture? Whence come all the horrors that cluster round the closing scenes of that awful and magnificent drama? Is it not from the wine with which Iago plied Cassio? What is Iago himself but a human embodiment of the Great Master of Evil? And, as that Master goes abroad over the earth seeking whom he may destroy, where does he find a more potent instrument than the treacherous wine-cup? This dark tragedy, with its crimes and sorrows, is but an epitome, a faint transcript, of ten thousand tragedies which are all the time enacting on this theatre of our daily life. How many are there at this moment, who, from the depths of agonized and remorseful hearts, can echo the words of Othello's sobered, but almost frenzied lieutenant, "O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!" "That mer should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! That we should with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!" "Oh! I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial—my reputation, Iago, my reputation!" "To be now a sensible man, by-and-by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil." In this land, and in our day, there are few cups which, for the young and excitable, are not "inordinate." Wines that are charged high with brandy, or brewed in the distillery of some remorseless fabricator, are never safe. Among wine-proverbs, there are two which are now more than ever significant of truth: "The most voluptuous of assassins is the bottle;" "Bacchus has drowned more than Neptune."

It is not the opinion of "temperance fanatics" merely, that adjudges drinking to be hazardous. It is so in their estimation who are close, practical observers and actors in life. Mr. Jefferson is said to have expressed his conviction—the result of long and various experience—that no man should be intrusted with office who drank. I have now before me evidence, still more definite, in the two-fold system of rates proposed to be applied in one of our largest cities by the same Life Insurance Company. The one set of rates is adapted to those who use intoxicating liquors; the other, to those who do not use them at all. Suppose that you wish your life to be assured to the extent of $1000, and that you are twenty years of age. If you practice total abstinence, the rate will be $11.60 per annum; if you use intoxicating drinks, it will be $14.70. At twenty-five years of age, the rates will be as $13.30 to $17; at thirty years of age, as $15.40 to $19.60. I have also before me the returns of two Beneficial Societies, in one of which the principle of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors was observed, while in the other it was not. The result has been, that with the same number of members in each, the deaths in one, during a given period, were but seventy-seven ; whereas, in the other, they were one hundred and ten ! making the chances of life as ten to seven in their favor who practice total abstinence. This result need not so much astonish us, when we are told, on the authority of persons who are said to have made careful and conscientious inquiry, that of all males who use intoxicating liquors, one in thirteen becomes intemperate.

Here, then, are results reached by men of business, when engaged in a mere calculation of probabilities. Drinking, according to their estimates, is hazardous—hazardous to life and property, hazardous to reputation and virtue. Is it not wise, then, to shun that hazard? Is it not our duty? Is not this a case in which the Saviour's injunction applies—“If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee ; if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee : for it is better for thee that one of thy members should perish than that thy whole body should be cast into hell-fire ?” We all consider it madness not to protect our children and ourselves against small-pox, by vaccination ; and this, though the chances of dying by the disease may be but one in a thousand, or one in ten thousand. Drunkenness is a disease more loathsome and deadly even than small-pox. Its approaches are still more stealthy ; and the specific against it—total abstinence—has never failed, and can not fail.

But let us admit for one moment and for the sake of argument—to admit it on other ground would be culpable)—let us admit that you can drink with safety to yourself. Can you drink with safety to your neighbor ? Are you charged with no responsibility in respect to him ? You drink, as you think, within the limits of safety. He, in imitation of your example, drinks also, but passes that unseen, unknown line, within which, for him, safety lies. Is not your indulgence, then, a stumbling-block—ay, perchance, a fatal stumbling-block in his way? Is it not, in principle, the very case contemplated by St. Paul, when he said, "It is good neither to eat flesh, NOR TO DRINK WINE, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak?" Yonder are the young and inexperienced, without habits of self-control, and with fiery appetites. Would you have them do as you do? Yonder is one who is just on the verge of the precipice that will plunge him into shame and woe unutterable; are you willing that he should find in your daily potations a specious apology for his own? Or yonder is one who is already a bondman to this fearful vice, but who feels his debasement, and would gladly be once more free; will you do that in his presence which will discourage him from striking boldly for emancipation? Nay, it may be that he is even now struggling bravely to be free. He has dashed away the cup of sorcery, and is practicing that which to him is the only alternative to ruin. Is it well, Christian—follower of Him who sought not his own, and went about doing good—is it well that from you should proceed an influence to press him back to his cups?—that you, by your example, should proclaim, that not to drink is to be over-scrupulous and mean-spirited?—that at your table, in your drawing-room, he should encounter the fascination which he finds it so hard to withstand, so fatal to yield to?

Nineteen years ago, I knew an instructor who stood in relations most intimate to three hundred students of a college. The disorders which occasionally invade such institutions, and the disgrace and ruin which are incurred by so many promising young men, result almost exclusively from the use of intoxicating liquors. This fact had so imprinted itself on this instructor's mind, that he made a strenuous effort to induce the whole of this noble band to declare for that which was then considered the true principle—total abstinence from distilled spirits. Fermented stimulants were not included; but it was pointedly intimated that intoxication on wine or beer would be a virtual violation of the engagement. The whole number, with perhaps two or three exceptions, acquiesced; and, for a few months, the effect was most marked in the increased order of the institution, and the improved bearing of its inmates. Soon, however, there were aberrations. Young men would resort occasionally to hotels and drink champagne; or they would indulge in beer at eating-houses. The evil which, at one time, seemed dammed out, was about to force itself back; and the question arose, What could be done? Then that professor came to the conclusion, that, for these young men at least, there was no safety but in abstinence from all intoxicating liquors. He had often protested against including wine in the same category with ardent spirits. But the wine these young men drank was as fatal to them and to college discipline as rum; and the simple alternative was between continued excesses, on the one hand, or total abstinence from all intoxicating beverage, on the other. Under such circumstances, this professor did not long hesitate. He determined to urge and exhort those for whose welfare he was so fearfully responsible, to the only course which was safe for them. But there was one huge difficulty in his way. It was the bottle of madeira which stood every day upon his own table. He felt, that from behind that bottle, his plea in behalf of abstinence from all vinous potations would sound somewhat strangely. He was not ready to encounter the appeal from theory to practice, which all are so prompt to make—none more prompt than the young—when they deal with the teachers of unwholesome doctrine. He determined, therefore, to prepare himself for his duty by removing every hindrance which his own example could place in the way of the impression which he was bent upon producing. Did he act well and wisely? Ye fathers and mothers, who know with what perils the young are encompassed when they go forth into the world, would you have advised him to cling to his wine? Or you, who may be about to commit a fiery and unstable son to a teacher's care and guidance, would you prefer that this teacher's example and influence should be for wine-drinking, or against it?

But if, in your judgment, that professor stands acquitted—nay, if you actually applaud his course, what, permit me to ask, is your duty?—yours, fathers and mothers! yours, sisters and brothers! yours, employers and teachers! There is not one of you but has influence over others, and that influence is much greater than you are apt to imagine. Is it not a sacred trust which should never be abused? O parents! do you consider, as you ought, how closely your children observe all your ways, and how eagerly and recklessly they imitate them? Employers! do you estimate sufficiently your responsibility in regard to hirelings and domestic servants, who are prompt to adopt your habits and manners, but who seldom possess the self-control which your education and position constrain you to exercise? Your precepts, enjoining sobriety and moderation, pass for little. Your practice, giving color and countenance to self-indulgence, sinks deep into their hearts. One hour spent by you in thoughtless conviviality may plant the seeds of sin and ruin in those by whom you are attended! And the crowd of wives, mothers, sisters, daughters, that I see before me—do they always consider with what wizard power they rule over man's sterner nature? It is our pride and privilege to defer to your sex. At all periods of life, and in all relations, you speak with a voice which penetrates to our gentler and nobler sentiments. Most of all is this the case when you burst into early womanhood, encompassed by bright hopes and fond hearts—when the Creator adorns you with graces and charms that draw toward you the dullest souls. Ah! how little do you appreciate, then, the sway which, for weal or woe, you wield over those of our sex who are your companions and friends! Is that sway always wise and holy? Is it always on the side of temperance and self-command? Alas! alas! could the grave give up its secrets, what tales of horror would it not reveal of woman's perverted influence—of woman thoughtlessly leading men, through the intoxicating cup, to the brink of utter and hopeless ruin! One case of the kind was mentioned to me lately. It is but one of many.

A young man, of no ordinary promise, unhappily contracted habits of intemperance. His excesses spread anguish and shame through a large and most respectable circle. The earnest and kind remonstrance of friends, however, at length led him to desist; and, feeling that for him to drink was to die, he came to a solemn resolution, that he would abstain entirely for the rest of his days. Not long after, he was invited to dine, with other young persons, at the house of a friend. Friend! did I say? pardon me: he could hardly be a friend who would deliberately place on the table before one lately so lost, now so marvelously redeemed, the treacherous instrument of his downfall. But so it was. The wine was in their feasts. He withstood the fascination, however, until a young lady, whom he desired to please, challenged him to drink. He refused. With banter and ridicule she soon cheated him out of all his noble purposes, and her challenge was accepted. He no sooner drank than he felt that the demon was still alive, and that from temporary sleep he was now waking with tenfold strength. "Now," said he to a friend who sat next to him, "now I have tasted again, and I drink till I die." The awful pledge was kept. Not ten days had passed before that ill-fated youth fell under the horrors of delirium tremens, and was borne to a grave of shame and dark despair. Who would envy the emotions with which that young lady, if not wholly dead to duty and to pity, retraced her part in a scene of gayety, which smiled only to betray?

Let me not be misunderstood. I do not maintain that drinking wine is, in the language of the schools, sin per se. There may be circumstances under which to use intoxicating liquors is no crime. There have been times and places in which the only intoxicating beverage was light wine, and where habits of inebriation were all but unknown. But is that our case? Distillation has filled our land with alcoholic stimulants of the most fiery and deleterious character. Our wines, in a large proportion of instances, are but spurious compounds, without grape-juice, and with a large infusion of distilled spirits, and even of more unhealthy ingredients. As long ago as the days of Addison, we read in the Tatler (No. 131) that in London there was "a fraternity of chemical operators, who worked under ground in holes, caverns, and dark retirements, to conceal their mysteries from the observation of mankind. These subterranean philosophers are daily employed in the transmutation of liquors; and, by the power of magical drugs and incantations, raising, under the streets of London, the choicest products of the hills and valleys of France. They can squeeze claret out of the sloe, and draw champagne out of an apple." The practice of substituting these base counterfeits for wine extracted from the grape has become so prevalent in this country, that well-informed and conscientious persons aver, that for every gallon of wine imported from abroad, ten or more are manufactured at home. "Five and twenty years ago," says the late J. Fennimore Cooper, "when I first visited Europe, I was astonished to see wine drunk in tumblers. I did not at first understand that half of what I had been drinking at home was brandy under the name of wine."

These adulterations and fabrications in the wine trade are not confined to our country or to England. They abound where the vine flourishes in greatest abundance. "Though the pure juice of the grape," says our eminent countryman Horatio Greenough (the sculptor), "can be furnished here (in Florence) for one cent a bottle, yet the retailers choose to gain a fraction of profit by the admission of water or drugs." He adds, "How far the destructive influence of wine, as here used, is to be ascribed to the grape, and how far it is augmented and aggravated by poisonous adulterations, it would be difficult to say." McMullen, a recent writer on wines, states that in France there are "extensive establishments (existing at Cette and Marseilles) for the manufacture of every description of wine, both white and red, to resemble the produce not only of France, but of all other wine-countries. It is no uncommon practice with speculators engaged in this trade to purchase and ship wines, fabricated in the places named, to other ports on the Continent; and, being branded and marked as the genuine wines usually are, they are then transhipped to the market for which they are designed, of which the United States is the chief. Such is the extent to which this traffic is carried, that one individual has been referred to in the French ports who has been in the habit of shipping, four times in the year, twenty thousand bottles of champagne, not the product of the grape, but fabricated in these wine-factories. It is well known that the imposition of these counterfeit wines has arrived at such a pitch as to become quite notorious, and the subject of much complaint, in this country at least."*

---

* McMullen on Wines, p. 172.

In the presence of facts like these, I ask, What is our duty? Were nine out of ten of the coins or bank-bills which circulate, counterfeit, we should feel obliged to decline them altogether. We should sooner dispense entirely with such a medium of circulation, than incur the hazard which would be involved in using it. And, even if we could discriminate unerringly ourselves, between the spurious and the genuine, we should still abstain, for the sake of others, lest our example, in taking such a medium at such a time, encourage fabricators in their work of fraud, and lead the unwary and ignorant to become their victims. But, in such a case, abstinence would be practiced at great personal inconvenience. It is not so with abstinence from intoxicating drinks. That can subject us to no inconvenience worthy to be compared with the personal immunity with which it invests us, and with the consoling consciousness that we are giving no encouragement to fraud, and placing no stumbling-block in the way of the weak and unwary.

The question, then, is not, What may have been proper in other days or other lands, in the time of Pliny or of Paul, but what is proper now, and in our own land. The Apostle points us to a case, in which to eat meat might cause one's brother to offend; and his own magnanimous resolution, under such circumstances, he thus avows—"If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." Thus what may at one time be but a lawful and innocent liberty, becomes at another a positive sin. The true question, then—the only practical question for the Christian patriot and philanthropist—is this: "Intemperance abounds! Ought not my personal influence, whether by example or by precept, to be directed to its suppression? Can it be suppressed while our present drinking usages continue? In a country where distilled liquors are so cheap and so abundant, and where the practice of adulterating every species of fermented liquor abounds—in such a country, can any practical and important distinction be made between different kinds of intoxicating liquors? If abstinence is to be practiced at all, as a prudential or a charitable act, can it have much practical value unless it be abstinence from all that can intoxicate?” These questions are submitted, without fear, to the most deliberate and searching scrutiny.

Ladies and gentlemen, I conclude. Neither your patience nor my own physical powers will permit me to prosecute this subject. I devoutly hope, that in the remarks which I have now submitted, I have offended against no law of courtesy or kindness. I wish to deal in no railing accusations, no wholesale denunciations. When Paul appeared before the licentious Felix, he reasoned with him, we are told, of temperance. It is the only appeal that I desire to make. I might invoke your passions or your prejudices; but they are unworthy instruments, which he will be slow to use who respects himself; and they are instruments which generally recoil with violence on the cause that employs them. There is enough in this cause to approve itself to the highest reason and to the most upright conscience. Let us not be weary, then, in calling them to our aid. If we are earnest, and yet patient; if we speak the truth in love, and yet speak it with all perseverance and all faithfulness, it must at length prevail. But few years have passed since some of us, who are now ardent in this good work, were as ignorant or skeptical as those whom we are most anxious to convince. We then thought ourselves conscientious in our doubts, or even in our opposition. Let our charity be broad enough to concede to those who are not yet with us the same generous construction of motives which we then claimed for ourselves. And let us resolve, that if this noble cause be not advanced, it shall be through no fault of ours; that our zeal and our discretion shall go hand in hand; and that fervent prayer to God shall join with stern and indomitable effort to secure for it a triumph alike peaceful and permanent.

It was a glorious consciousness which enabled St. Paul, when about to take leave of those among whom he had gone preaching the kingdom of God, to say, “I take you to record this day that I am pure from the blood of all men.” May this consciousness be ours, my friends, in respect, at least, to the blood of drunkards! May not one drop of the blood of their ruined souls be found at last spotting our garments! Are we ministers of Christ? Are we servants and followers of Him who taught that it is more blessed to give than to receive? Let us see to it that no blood-guiltiness attaches to us here. We can take a course which will embolden us to challenge the closest inspection of our influence as it respects Intemperance; which will enable us to enter without fear, on this ground at least, the presence of our Judge. May no false scruples, then, no fear of man which bringeth a snare, no sordid spirit of self-indulgence, no unrelenting and unreasoning prejudice, deter us from doing that over which we can not fail to rejoice when we come to stand before the Son of Man!

“WHY I HAVE TAKEN THE PLEDGE.”

---

BY THE VERY REV. FRANCIS CLOSE, D.D., DEAN OF CARLISLE.

---

DRUNKENNESS was a crime not unknown in the world when the Holy Scriptures were written; in fact, most powerful testimony is borne against this sin in the sacred pages. For example—“Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink, that continue until night, until wine inflame them.” “Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink.” “The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty.” “Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? They that tarry long at the wine! they that go to seek mixed wine,” etc. Some hundred and fifty passages might be quoted condemning the excess and abuse of strong drink; but it is urged that total abstinence is nowhere inculcated, much less a pledged total abstinence. Are we then justified in attempting a scheme for the reformation of morals for which we have no direct authority in holy writ? Are we not adopting a plan of merely human invention with a view of diminishing a great evil, and in fact, substituting it for the means of God’s own appointment?

Now, this question may be discussed, first, upon this assumption, that Scripture is totally silent on the subject, and we will endeavor to account for that silence. If positive, direct Scripture authority is required for every institution of a moral and religious nature, where is that authority for the baptism of infants? Where is that authority for the admission of women to a participation in the Holy Communion? But to take an illustration more in point. There is one universally approved and adopted measure for the reformation of the masses for which there is no sort of authority in Holy Scripture.

I have been an advocate of Christian Education by means of schools,—daily, infant, national, public, and private,—for many years, and I never could find a text of Scripture which even recognized their existence; none in which the remotest reference was made to a school, or anything like our modern methods of taking the children from their parents and putting them under paid instructors.

All that Scripture teaches, exhorts, enforces upon the subject of the training of the young, recognizes no relative position but that of PARENT AND CHILD! It knows no other correlative claims and duties! I challenge the discovery of any such passage! It is only inferentially, from the necessity of the case, from the strange conventional habits of modern nations, from the ignorance, inability, or unwillingness of parents, or their necessary occupations,—it is only by these that we can deduce from Scripture the lawfulness of establishing schools, and the duty of the Church and the public to support them.

I affirm that the whole system of public education now universally adopted by every denomination of Christians is as much a scheme of man's invention, a framework of human organization, as the system of pledged abstinence can be! There is no direct authority in Scripture for either; but he would be esteemed a fool, or a madman, who would on such grounds object to so manifest and palpable a good—nay, a necessity—in the one case; and why then should we reason differently in the other? The fact and act of total abstinence is nowhere condemned in Scripture, nor is it contrary to reason or common sense. To lay down the dogma that we are to have Scriptural authority for every conventional arrangement for the good of churches or nations would be to reduce us to the position of mere automats who could draw no inference, who could originate no beneficent scheme, but must travel only in the narrow and deep ruts in which men of by-gone ages traveled before us.

MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

National Temperance Society.

Laws of Fermentation and Wines of the Ancients. 12mo, 129 pp. By Rev. WM. PATTON, D.D. Paper, 30 cents; cloth ....	$0 60
Four Pillars of Temperance. By JOHN W. KIKTON.....	75
Alcohol: Its Nature and Effects. By CHARLES A. STOREY, M.D. ....	90
Scripture Testimony against Intoxicating Wine. By Rev. WM. RITCHIE, of Scotland.....	60
Bible Rule of Temperance; or, Total Abstinence from all Intoxicating Drinks. By Rev. GEORGE DUFFIELD, D.D.....	60
Alcohol: Its Place and Power. By JAMES MILLER. And The Use and Abuse of Tobacco. By JOHN LIZARS.....	1 00
Zoological Temperance Convention. By Rev. EDWARD HITCHCOCK, D.D., of Amherst College.....	75
Delavan's Consideration of the Temperance Argument and History .....	1 50
Temperance Anecdotes. By G. W. BUNGAY.....	1 00
Communion Wine and Bible Temperance. By Rev. WM. M. THAYER. Paper, 20 cents; cloth.....	50
The New Temperance Speaker. By J. N. STEARNS.....	75
Lunarius: A Visitor from the Moon .....	35
Bound Volume of Tracts. 100 Tracts, 500 pp.....	1 00
Temperance Pledge-Book .....	1 60
This Pledge-Book for Sunday-Schools and Juvenile Temperance Organizations contains pages with sufficient space for one thousand names, and also for the records of meetings held.
Text-Book of Temperance. By Dr. F. R. LEES, F.S.A.....	1 50
National Temperance Almanac, 1872 .....	10
Packet of Assorted Tracts, No. 1. Nos. 1 to 50. 240 pp.....	25
Packet of Assorted Tracts, No. 2. Nos. 50 to 100, 260 pages... ..	25
Pocket Temperance Pledge-Book .....	10
Volumes of Advocate and Banner, bound together, 1866, '67, '68, '69, '70, and '71, each .....	2 00
Bound Vols. of Banner, paper covers, 1866, '67, '68, '69, '70, and '71, each .....	60
Packet of 72 Pictorial Children's Tracts .....	25
John Swig. With appropriate illustrations.....	15
Temperance Alphabet in Colors, illustrated by EDWARD CARSWELL, .....	25
Bugle Notes for the Temperance Army. Paper covers, 30 cents; board.....	35
A new collection of Songs, Quartets, and Glee, adapted to the use of all Temperance gatherings. Glee Clubs, etc., together with the Odes of the Sons of Temperance and Good Templars. Edited by W. F. SHERWIN and J. N. STEARNS.
Temperance Chimes. 123 pages, paper covers, 30 cents; boards, .....	35
Temperance Hymn-Book. 128 pages, paper covers, 12 cents; boards.....	15
The Rum Fiend, and Other Poems. By WM. H. BURLEIGH....	20
Forty Years' Fight with the Drink Demon. 12mo, 400 pages, By CHARLES JEWETT, M.D.....	1 50

TEMPERANCE SERMONS.

The National Temperance Society are publishing a series of Sermons upon various phases of the temperance question, by some of the leading Clergymen in America. The following are already published :

Common Sense for Young Men. By Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, $0 15
Moral Duty of Total Abstinence. By Rev. T. L. CUYLER .....	15
The Evil Beast. By Rev. T. DE WITT TALMAGE .....	15
The Good Samaritan. By Rev. J. B. DUNN .....	15
Self-Denial: A Duty and a Pleasure. By Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D.D., Chaplain of United States Senate .....	15
The Church and Temperance. By JOHN W. MEARS, D.D., Professor at Hamilton College, New York .....	15
Active Pity of a Queen. By Rev. JOHN HALL, D.D. ....	15
Temperance and the Pulpit. By Rev. C. D. FOSS, D.D. ....	15
The Evils of Intemperance. By Rev. J. ROMEYN BERRY .....	15

Other Sermons will soon follow.

The National Temperance Advocate.

The National Temperance Society and Publication House publish a new Monthly Temperance Paper, the object of which is to promote the interests of the cause of Temperance, by disseminating light from every quarter upon its moral, social, financial, and scientific bearings. The best talent in the land will be secured for its editors and contributors. Terms—in advance: Single copy, one year, $1; 10 copies to one address, $9; 20 copies to one address, $16; all over 20 copies, at 80 cents per copy.

Band of Hope Supplies.

Band of Hope Manual, per dozen .....	$0 70
Temperance Catechism, " .....	60
Band of Hope Melodies, per hundred .....	10 00
Certificates of Membership, " .....	3 00
Juvenile Temperance Pledges, " .....	3 00
Pledge and Certificate, combined (in colors), per hundred .....	4 00
Juvenile Temperance Speaker .....	25
The Temperance Speaker .....	75
Four New Temperance Dialogues .....	30
Band of Hope Badge, plain, $1 per dozen; enamelled, $1 25 per dozen; silver and enamelled, 50 cents each.
Illuminated Temperance Cards, sets of 10 each .....	35
Illustrated Juvenile Tracts, per thousand .....	3 00

The Youth's Temperance Banner.

The National Temperance Society and Publication House publish a beautifully Illustrated Monthly Paper, especially adapted to children and youth, Sunday-school and Juvenile Temperance Organizations. Each number contains several choice engravings, a piece of music, and a great variety of articles from the pens of the best writers for children in America. It should be placed in the hands of every child in the land. Terms—in advance:

Single Copies, one year .....	$0 25	Thirty Copies, to one address .....	$3 75
Eight Copies, to one address, .....	1 00	Forty " " " .....	5 00
Ten " " " .....	1 25	Fifty " " " .....	6 25
Fifteen " " " .....	1 88	One Hundred, " " " .....	12 00
Twenty " " " .....	2 50

Address

J. N. STEARNS, Publishing Agent,

58 Reade Street, New York.